PREFACE.

Wykeham's Register is one of the series of bishops' registers kept in Winchester Cathedral. It is in a state of excellent preservation, but the binding, which is modern, is the worse for wear. There are four parts, bound in two folio volumes: Part I, containing institutions and collations to vacant benefices, and confirmations of heads of religious houses and hospitals, with a few official instruments; and Part II, containing ordinations, are edited in this volume. Part III, containing wills, mandates from cardinals, licences of non-residence, and other official instruments; and Part IV, containing crown writs and messages, with the returns made to them, will be dealt with in a second volume, which is in course of preparation.

Parts I and II contain 420 leaves, 14¼ in. high by 10in. wide, and written on both sides in fair and legible hands. Portions of both parts were transcribed by the Rev. G. N. Godwin for the Hampshire Record Society before an editor was found; for the remainder the Editor is solely responsible. The original spelling of proper names, which was more phonetic five hundred years ago than it is now, and often varies, even in the same instrument, has been followed as a general rule. In the head-notes of the institutions the modern names of the benefices are usually given. Inasmuch as institutions, resignations, and the like are invariably common forms, of which precedents will be found in Gibson's Codex, it seemed unnecessary to do more than give one example of each instrument in extenso, and summarize the rest. Hence the condensation of 700 folio pages of institutions in the original into 249 octavo pages in this volume.

The see of Winchester having become vacant by the death of William de Edyngdone, who died October 7, 1366, the prior and convent of St. Swithun's Cathedral Church elected William of Wykeham, archdeacon of Lincoln, and keeper of the privy seal, under a congé d' élire dated only six days later ; and confirmation by the Crown followed in due course. On December 1 the king granted the custody of the temporals of the see to the bishop elect. It remained for the pope to grant the leave for consecration ; but instead of doing this, Urban V issued a bull (p. 2), dated December 11, which merely appointed the bishop-elect administrator of the spirituals and temporals of the see during pleasure. His consecration, therefore, was deferred. Why the pope took this dilatory course is uncertain. It may have been intended to mark his displeasure at the refusal of the English people to admit his right to "provide" bishops for English sees (Moberly, Life of Wykeham, pp. 61–4, ed. II) or it may have been intended to give the bishop-elect time to resign his numerous benefices without cure of souls, which he did in fact resign about this time, and to sever his connection with various secular offices and employments.

During the interval of time between his appointment to administer the spirituals and temporals of the see and his consecration, a period of nearly eight months, Wykeham did no episcopal act, being as he tells us (p. 3) too busily engaged in the service of his royal master ; but delegated his functions to a canon of Sarum, named John de Wormenhale (p. 1) who granted institutions (pp. 4–7) until Wykeham's consecration. The pope granted a bull for that purpose on the 14th of July, 1367, at Viterbo. It reached Southwark nearly three months later ; and on the 10th of October, 1367, the bishop-elect was consecrated in St. Paul's Cathedral by Langham, archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by Sudbury, bishop of London, and Wyvile, bishop of Salisbury. The temporals had been restored to him two days before. The ceremonies at his enthronement are described at the beginning of Part III.

From the date of his consecration until his death on the 27th of September, 1404, the bishop resided in the diocese, and acted, generally ordaining in person, except during the last three years of his life, when strength failed him. An itinerary of his episcopate will be given as an appendix to Vol. II. Southwark was his chief place of residence at first, and while he was chancellor; and there he resided during his political disgrace in 1376–7. The last few years of his life were passed at Bishop's Waltham, and there he died. He had also houses of residence at Farnham, Esher, Highclere, Wolvesey near Winchester, and Marwell, about five miles south of that city.

During his thirty-seven years tenure of the see the bishop ordained about 1334 acolyths, 1382 sub-deacons, 1360 deacons, and 1273 priests of his own, and (by dimission) of other dioceses, besides granting letters dimissory to numerous candidates. A good many candidates came to him with dimissory letters from the diocese of Exeter, in consequence of the bishop of that see having a favourite residence in Surrey (p. 294).

Candidates for holy orders were then, as now, examined before ordination (p. 294). The names of the examiners are recorded in one instance (p. 267). One who was only in minor orders might be instituted to any benefice, but he had to proceed to Holy orders in due course, or else forfeit his benefice (p. 97). Residence was insisted on as a condition precedent to enjoying the fruits of the benefice, but one who was under priest's orders might have a license of non-residence in order to attend a school (p. 116), or go to the University, on condition of keeping a curate, and providing for the distribution of alms during his absence.

The canon law against pluralities was as follows:—A clerk in orders might hold any number of benefices without cure of souls, as Wykeham himself did before he was made bishop; but the acceptance of a second benefice with cure of souls ipso facto vacated the first, unless a dispensation could be obtained from the pope. The fact of benefices without cure of souls not being subject to this rule may have encouraged the discharging of very poor benefices, as in the case of St. James', Winchester (p. 248).

The frequency of exchanges between the clergy of the diocese, as well as into and out of the diocese, is remarkable, about two out of every five or six of Wykeham's institutions being the result of an exchange. Exchanges then, as now, were carried out by means of resignation and institution, one bishop granting a commission to institute to the other bishop, in cases where one of the parties to an exchange was beneficed in another diocese. But the existence of any system of promotion by these means may be doubted. The frequency of exchanges is most likely due to the unrest of the period, and the independence of local ties enjoyed by a celibate clergy.

In connection with the subject of exchanges, it should be borne in mind that the diocese of Winchester included the whole of Surrey, except a few parishes in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Archbishop; that the county of Berks was in the diocese of Salisbury; that the see of Lincoln included the counties of Oxon, Bucks, Huntingdon, Bedford, and Leicester, as well as those of Lincoln and Notts, being in fact conterminous with the ancient kingdom of Mercia; and that the see of London included Essex and Hertfordshire.

Two cases of appropriation occur in Part I, that of Ewell to Chertsey abbey (p. 128), and that of Heckfield to New College, Oxford (p. 140). Appropriation was the way by which the regular clergy aggrandized their houses at the expense of the secular or parochial clergy, and is said to be peculiar to England. Originally the religious houses bettered themselves by reserving annuities or "pensions" out of the fruits of the churches in their gift (p. 23, note), but after this practice was forbidden by the Constitution of Othobon in 1268 they had recourse to appropriation, which consisted in annexing such churches to their own use; and whenever leave to do this was granted by the crown and the bishop, it was stipulated that there should be a secular vicar with a congrua portio, or sufficient provision, for the support of himself and his successors, unless there happened to be a vicar already, as in the case of Heckfield. To quote one instance, the church of Downton in Wiltshire belonged to the see of Winchester, and when the bishop appropriated it to the maintenance and support of the scholars of his new College at Winchester, a vicarage or provision of small tithe was made by Brinton, bishop of Rochester, whom the bishop sent down with a commission for the purpose. The deed of ordination, dated in May, 1383, is preserved at Winchester College. It is by these appropriations, and not by anything that occurred under Henry VIII, that the class of parochial clergy are losers. What was taken away from the church under Henry VIII was taken from the regular clergy, who ceased to exist as a class when the religious houses were dissolved, and their appropriations became bona vacantia and as such devolved on the Crown.

There are only two appendices: the first contains a list of benefices in the gift of the bishop, with the actual value and assessment of each, and a Taxatio, or valuation of all benefices in the diocese, with the amount of the tenth on each. These particulars are copied from a small MS. quarto volume, which tradition assigns to the bishop, and probably was his vade mecum or book of reference. But it is earlier than his time, having been written between the years 1333 and 1345, and the Taxatio is said to be a copy of the Taxatio of Pope Nicholas IV (1288–94). The bishop apparently bequeathed it to, or intended it for his new College at Winchester. It has 88 leaves, 8¾ inches high by 6¼ inches wide, and contains, in addition to the contents of Appendix I, a valuation of prebends in Chichester Cathedral; the names of Cardinals under pope Clement VI (1342–52); a disquisition on the word indictio[1]; a list of knights' fees held of the bishop in Pontissara's time; the archbishops of Canterbury, ending with Stratford (1333-48); the bishops of Winchester, ending with Orleton (1333–45); the founders and benefactors of Winchester Cathedral; the bull of Pope John XIII to king Eadgar de erectione canonicorum; an "implementum" or stocking of the bishopric estates, date not given, namely, 128 affri, or draught horses, 1556 oxen, 3517 wethers (muttones), 4766 ewes, 3521 lambs; forms of doing homage and fealty; manors held by the prior and convent of St. Swithun and other religious houses in the diocese; the values of the spirituals of the archbishopric of Canterbury and of the bishoprics of Rochester, London, Winchester, Chichester, Sarum, Bath and Wells, Hereford, Exeter, Worcester, Ely and Lincoln; and a charter of Edward III de libertatibus ecclesiae Anglicanae.

[1] "Indictio" was the name at Rome for a cycle of fifteen years, the first year in the cycle being called indictio prima, the second indictio secunda, and so on. It began viii Kal. Oct. (24 September), and was divided into three quinquennia.

On the bishop's death the MS. came into the possession of Thomas Aylward, one of his executors, and rector of Havant, who prefixed to it the life of Wykeham which Moberly printed (Life of Wykeham, appendix D, ed. II.) On Aylward's death the volume fell into the hands of his executor, John Exton. He sent it to Winchester College, as appears from the following entry in the compotus roll for the year 1418–9:—"In dato Johanni Arnold, summonitori domini episcopi Wyntoniensis, portanti ad Collegium unum librum datum Collegio per dominum fundatorem, in quo continentur taxationes omnium ecclesiarum in singulis dioces. per totam Angliam, qui fuerat in custodiâ Johannis Exton, executoris domini Thomæ Aylward, iii*s.* iv*d.*"

Appendix II contains a short account of the foundation, dedication, and annual value at the dissolution of the religious houses and colleges mentioned in parts I and II, for the convenience of those who have not access to Tanner's Notitia Monastica or Dugdale's Monasticon.

It remains for me to tender my thanks to the Lord Bishop of the diocese for continuing the privileges afforded by his lamented predecessor to the editor; and to acknowledge the courtesy of Charles Wooldridge, Esq., the diocesan registrar, in giving me the facilities which he so kindly gave me throughout the twelve months during which this volume has been preparing.

[The Bull in English.]

Urban, etc., to his beloved son William of Wykeham, archdeacon of Lincoln, and administrator in spirituals and temporals of the church of Winchester, health and apostolic benediction. Great as is our care for all the churches throughout the world entrusted to our charge, yet greater is our care for churches deprived of their pastors, lest they suffer loss in things spiritual and temporal. Long time ago, therefore, while Bishop William presided over the See, we determined specially to reserve unto ourselves the provision of his successor when the time should come, any attempt of any other persons to the contrary notwithstanding. And now when the See has become vacant by reason of the late bishop having paid the debt of nature, we are willing to make provision for the government thereof ; and having you commended to us by many credible witnesses for your knowledge of literature, your honourable life and habits, your prudence in spiritual and your circumspection in temporal things, we, with the advice of our brethren, do ordain, constitute, and appoint you to be administrator-general of the church of Winchester both in spirituals and temporals, with the same powers as the archbishop of Canterbury exercises over vacant sees in his province, and generally with the same powers, privileges, and rights of patronage and collation as a real bishop of Winchester would exercise, prohibiting you, nevertheless, to alienate the possessions of the See. Dated at Avignon, 11th December, 1366.

Here begins the register of acts and deeds of the Reverend Father Sir William de Wikeham (sic), for whom a provision of the bishopric of Winchester was made by Urban V of happy memory, Pope by Divine providence, dated Viterbo, 14th July, 1367, and who was consecrated in the Cathedral church of London by the reverend father Simon Langham, archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the reverend fathers Simon Sudbury, bishop of London, and Robert Wyvill, bishop of Sarum, on Sunday the 10th day of October, 1367.

Wykeham to Pope Urban V, acknowledging receipt of bull for his consecration, dated at Viterbo, 2 Id. Jul. (14 July), 1367:—

[The Bishop's Oath in English.]

Southwark, 14 Oct., 1367.

I, William, elect of Winchester, will from this hour be faithful and obedient to the blessed father and the holy Roman church, and to my lord, Lord Urban V and his canonical successors: I will not by word or deed do any of them injury of life or limb: their secrets entrusted to me by messenger or letter I will reveal to none: In retaining and defending the papacy and the principality of St. Peter I will be their assistant, saving my Orders against all men: the legate of the Holy See I will use honourably and aid in his progresses: when summoned to Convocation I will go if there be no canonical impediment: the Roman court I will visit once in three years if without the Alps, and once in two years if within: the possessions of the See appertaining to my own support I will neither sell nor pledge. So help me God and his holy gospels.

[1] The practice of reserving pensions or annual payments out of the fruits of churches in the gift of religious houses was forbidden by the Constitutions of Ottobon, A.D. 1268 (Gibs., p. 797). The amount of such pensions was no doubt originally fixed with the intention of leaving no more than a congrua portio or sufficient provision for the incumbent, as in the case of vicarages; but as time went on the decrease in the exchangeable value of money rendered most of these pensions unimportant deductions from the gross profits of the benefices out of which they issued.

[2] "Although tithes of common right do belong to the church of the parish within which they arise, yet a man may prescribe to have tithes within the parish of another, and this is what is called a portion of tithes (Gibs., p. 663). One reason of this may be the lord of a manor's having his estate extending into what is now apportioned into distinct parishes; for there were tithes before the present distribution of parishes took place."—Phill., Eccl. Law, p. 1148, Second Edition.

[1] By a canon made in the fourth Council of Lateran, A.D. 1215, entitled, "Quod nullus habeat duo beneficia cum curâ animarum" it is enacted that whoso having a benefice with cure of souls without dispensation takes a second shall ipso jure be deprived of the first. (Gibs, p. 903–5.) This canon was followed in the Arches Court in 1848 in a case of Burder v. Mason, 1 Robertson, p. 614. The power of granting dispensation to hold more than one benefice with cure has been reserved since the Reformation to the Archbishop of Canterbury and is regulated by Canon 41 of 1603. The statute law against pluralities is contained in stat. 1 and 2 Vict., c. 106, repealing Acts 21 Hen. VIII, c. 13, and 57 Geo. IV, c. 99, as amended by stats. 13 and 14 Vict., c. 98, and 48 and 49 Vict., c. 54.

[1] A grant in commendam is where a benefice being void is granted to the charge and care of a parson to be supplied until it can be provided of a pastor; and this, according to Gregory's Constitutions, may not be for a longer period than six months.—Gibs., p. 914.

[2] The Vicarage of Warlingham belonged to the alien priory of Bermondsey, which, like the rest of the alien priories, was in the King's hands at this time. These alien priories were first seized by K. Edward I, in the year 1285, when war with France broke out. In 1 Edward III there was an act of restitution, but in the year 1337 they were seized again, and continued in the King's hands during the remainder of the reign of Edward III and the reign of Richard II. Henry IV restored some of them, but with a proviso that the inmates should be Englishmen, and that the "apport" or tribute formerly rendered to the parent monasteries abroad should in time of war be rendered to the Crown (Rot. Parl., III, p. 469). During the latter part of the reign of K. Richard II the parent monasteries were allowed to sell the estates appertaining to their alien priories, a privilege of which Wykeham availed himself for the purpose of endowing his two St. Mary Winton Colleges. By Stat. 1 Hen. V (Rot. Parl. IV, 38), their possessions were finally appropriated to the Crown.

The archdeacon's commissary, sitting in the church of St. Mary Magdalen, Bermondsey, on the 26th of September, pronounced the election to be null and void, by reason of various defects of procedure and form, but admitted Inguerand in exercise of a power of provision delegated by the bishop.]

[130.] EWELL.—Appropriation of ch. of Ewell to the abbey of Chertsey for the better support and maintenance of the abbot and convent[1]:—

Universis sanctae matris ecclesiae filiis, etc., Willelmus, etc. Cum pastoralis officii solicitudinem deceat devotissimè circa pietatis opera se exhibere solicitam et devotam, et presertim circa ea quae ad religionis profectum tendunt et divini cultûs augmentum respicere dinoscuntur, liberalem pariter et attentam, ne pereant et ad non esse tendant ea quae divino instinctu fuerant et sunt sanctissimè ordinata. Exhibita siquidem nobis pro parte religiosorum virorum abbatis et conventûs monasterii de Certeseye ordinis sancti Benedicti nostrae diocesis petitionis series continebat, quod cum monasterium supradictum tempore fundationis eius dictae minus exiliter extitit dotatum et multorum jam hospitum accessu, eo quod prope diversas vias regias situatum existat, sit multipliciter oneratum, ac maior pars terrarum suarum arrabilium de quibus victum suum principaliter adquirere et habere deberent propter raritatem servientium et carentiam cultorum et ex hominum epidemeis seu pestilentiis precedentibus sterilis maneat et inculta, ac domibus et edificiis ad dictum monasterium pertinentibus ipsorumque ecclesiâ ob

[1] Appropriation is the annexing of a benefice to the proper and perpetual use of a religious house or collegiate body. It was a common way of increasing the revenue of such houses or bodies when reduced by mismanagement or other cause. The appropriators became perpetual lay-rectors by virtue of the appropriation, and by the constitutions of Othobon were required to provide a competent endowment for the secular clerk, who thenceforward had the cure of souls. This obligation was further enforced on appropriators by the Statutes of Vicarages, 15 Ric. II, c. 6, and 4 Hen. IV, c. 12. The former statute, indeed, makes a sufficient endowment for a secular vicar the condition precedent to appropriation. The consent of the crown, as well as of the ordinary, was required before the appropriation, for the reason that the crown as patron paramount, as well as the ordinary, had an interest in lapses, which, after appropriation to a perpetual lay-rector, could not occur.

Unde nobis humiliter supplicaverunt, ut consideratis causis supradictis, et aliis piis causis nobis per ipsos expositis et expressis, ipsorum indigentiae benigno affectu compati, et habitâ consideratione debitâ ad premissa, ecclesiam parochialem de Ewell nostrae diocesis de ipsorum patronatu eis et eorum monasterio supradicto in augmentum sustentationis suae ac supportationem et relevamen onerum predictorum annectere, appropriare, incorporare, et unire, licenciâ illustrissimi principis domini nostri regis Angliae et Franciae, et aliorum quorum interest in hac parte prehabitâ, prout haec in literis regiis inde confectis pleniùs continentur, dignaremur, in proprios usus suos perpetuò possidendam. Dilectorum nobis in Christo custodis et scolarium collegii beatae Mariae Wynton. in Oxoniâ nobis oblata petitio continebat quod cum ipsum collegium quod in et de numero unius custodis necnon septuaginta scolarium clericorum in theologiâ canonico et civili juribus ac in artibus in universitate Oxoniae actualiter studentium consistit, a cuius quidem collegii institutione plenariâ quatuor anni minimè sunt elapsi, adeo exiliter dotatum existat, quod attentis omnibus incumbentibus eisdem nonnullis quoque infortuniis per sinistros eventus varios occurrentibus ad eorum sustentationem congruam nec ad onera huius-

[1] The marginal note here, "Resignatio ecclesiae de Heghefelde juxta formam extravagant. et execrabil." refers to the Constitutio execrabilis, as it was called from its commencing with the words, "Execrabilis quorundam tam religiosorum quam secularium ambitio," which forms tit. III, "De prebendis et dignitatibus," of a constitution of Pope John XXII, and runs thus :—"Qui vero deinceps receperint dignitatem vel personatum seu officium aut aliud beneficium animarum curam habens annexam, si antea simile beneficium obtinebant, illud . . . absque morae dispendio in ordinariorum manibus dimittere debeant pari modo, alioquin extunc sint ipso jure secundo privati, et nedum ad sacros suscipiendos ordines, quinetiam ad habendum quodcunque beneficium ecclesiasticum inhabiles reputentur." It is one of the twenty constitutions of Pope John XXII, which, as well as some others made by other popes, are called extravagantes, for the reason that they being written in no order or method—vagantur extra corpus collectionum canonum—and were collected by private authority only, and that not until the year 1340. However, they ultimately got added to the body of canon law. Execrabilis is at least as stringent as the canon made in the Fourth Council of Lateran (see note, p. 25) A.D. 1215.

Nos verò profectum scolasticum, quantum cum Deo possumus, cupientes augeri, dictorumque custodis et scolarium necessitatibus in premissis oportunis remediis subvenire, ac nichilominus volentes in prefato negotio procedere viâ juris super premissis, et ea concernentibus, ante omnia inquirendum fore decrevimus, justitiâ suadente. Vobis igitur in virtute obedientiae firmiter injungendo mandamus quatenus super omnibus et singulis causis in dictâ petitione contentis per viros fidedignos in formâ juris juratos ipsorum notitiam melius obtinentes, vocatis vocandis, diligentem inquisitionem fideliter faciatis. The return, omitting preamble :—

Dicunt, quod prefati custos et scolares, qui sunt septuaginta in numero, sicut asserunt, preter servientes suos necessarios, adeo exiliter et sufficienter dotati existunt in bonis et facultatibus, et quod possessiones et facultates ac redditus spirituales et etiam temporales quos optinent de presenti per generales hominum, animalium, bestiarum, et pecudum pestilentias et epidemias, caristiam et carentiam servitorum, inundationes aquarum, ventorum quoque et aliarum tempestatum turbines impetuosas et aeris intemperies plus solito invalescentes, guerrarum tam extrinsecarum quam intrinsecarum, et insurrectionum discrimina, decimas, taxas, et alias impositiones varias per dominum nostrum regem occasione guerrarum et insurrectionum huiusmodi impositas, nonnullos quoque alios eventus varios et occursus sinistros supra modum antiquitùs consuetum variè ac notoriè modernis temporibus contingentes, ad tam modicum valorem patentem sunt redacti quod ad sustentationem congruam ipsorum custodis et scolarium nec ad onera eis incumbentia debitè supportanda non sufficiunt hiis diebus, nec sufficient, ut creditur, in futurum. Item dicunt, quod capella, aula, camerae, coquina, pistrina, et aliae domus et edificia predicti collegii necessaria pro morâ et inhabitatione dictorum custodis et scolarium remanent imperfecta utpote a primariâ fundatione seu institutione dicti collegii nondum confecta quae maximâ indigent constructione, et quasi inestimabiles sumptus requirunt. Item dicunt quod vigens necessitas et evidens utilitas custodis, scolarium, et collegii predictorum exposcunt ut dicta ecclesia de Heghefelde eisdem approprietur, incorporetur, ac etiam uniatur in partem sustentationis eorum et supportationis onerum predictorum. Item dicunt prefati jurati, quod super omnibus et singulis supradictis in parochiâ ecclesiae de Heghefelde predictae ac etiam in Oxoniâ et in locis vicinis, quod videlicet ipsa sint adeo vera, notoria, et etiam manifesta, quod nullâ poterunt tergiversatione celari.—Winchester, 8 Jan., 1382–3.

[In English.]

The deponents say that the warden and scholars (who, they say, are seventy in number, besides servants) are so meagrely and inadequately endowed, and their present sources of income, as well spiritual as temporal, are by plague of men and murrain of cattle, scarcity, want of farm servants, floods, storms, tempests, severity of weather, wars and tumults, tenths and taxes imposed by the king in consequence thereof, and other events and accidents, such as notoriously occur in these days oftener than they did of old, so far reduced that they do not now suffice, and will not, it is believed, suffice in the future, for the proper support of the warden and scholars. And they say that the chapel, hall, chambers, kitchen, bake-house, and other buildings and offices needed for lodging the warden and scholars continue structurally incomplete from the first founding of the college, and require outlay upon them which cannot be computed. And they say that the necessities and evident interests of the warden and scholars demand that the church of Heckfield should be appropriated to and united with their foundation for their support and maintenance. And they say that these things are so well known as to be beyond denial in the parish of Heckfield, and in Oxford and the neighbourhood.

[The above return vouched by m. John Lydeforde, v. of Wonston, officiary of the diocese; Thomas Boys, LL.D., provost of St. Elizabeth's college; John de Ketone, treasurer of Wolvesey; John de Meltone, M.A. (afterwards schoolmaster at Winchester college); John Laurens, LL.B., vicar of Kingsclere; William Hyldercle, notary public, v. of Winchfield; John de Swafham; Henry de Thorpe, diocesan apparitor and notary public; and William Lydeforde, clk.]

HECKFIELD.—Appropriation of this church to New college Oxford, with the consent of the Crown and the prior and convent of St. Swithun:—

Universis sanctae matris ecclesiae filiis presentes literas inspecturis Willelmus, etc. . . . Unde nobis humiliter supplicârunt, ut habitâ per nos consideratione debitâ ad premissa, ecclesiam parochialem de Heghefelde nostrae diocesis, quae de ipsorum custodis et scolarium patronatu existit, eisdem custodi et scolaribus et eorum successoribus ac collegio supradictis caritatis intuitu appropriare, unire, annectere, ac incorporare in divini cultûs et scientiarum liberalium predictarum augmentum ac subsidium, et uberiorem sustentationem ipsorum et supportationem onerum predictorum ex causis premissis auctoritate nostrâ ordinariâ dignaremur, in proprios usus suos perpetuò possidendam. Liceatque prefatis custodi et scolaribus vigore et virtute appropriationis, unionis, annexionis, et incorporationis huiusmodi predictarum possessionem eiusdem ecclesiae de Heghefelde, jurium et pertinentium suorum universorum, per se, alium vel alios eorum nomine apprehendere et nancisci, adquirere, ingredi et retinere, fructusque et proventus eiusdem ecclesiae percipere ac liberè disponere de eisdem, nostrâ vel successorum nostrorum, alteriusve cuiuscunque licentiâ minimè requisitâ, juribus et consuetudinibus ecclesiae nostrae Wyntoniensis et ipsius dignitate in omnibus semper salvis. This result was then announced and written on three billets (cedulae), one of which was sent to lord William Arundel, another was retained by Robert de Spaldynge, and the third remained at the priory. [TRANSLATION.]

Henry, etc., . . . greeting. Whereas of our special grace to our certain knowledge and with the assent of our council in the last Parliament we yielded the alien priory of St. Mary of Carisbrooke to which Thomas de Val Osoul was duly admitted and inducted, as appears by letters of institution and induction exhibited in our Chancery, which priory was seized by King Edward our grandfather, together with other lands and tenements of foreign monks of the dominion of France in England on the occasion of the war between him and those of France, and continued so seized by us, and we granted and restored the same to the prior, to have and to hold to him and the priors, his successors, together with all cells, manors, lands, tenements, rents, services, knight's fees, advowsons of churches, vicarages, chapels, chantries, and all other benefices whatsoever, and also with all pensions, portions, tithes, oblations, alms, and other emoluments, profits, things, and possessions, as well spiritual as temporal, to the said priory belonging, rendering yearly to us and our heirs during the war between us and those of France the ancient "apport"[1] customarily paid to the capital house beyond the seas in time of peace. But so nevertheless that the prior and his successors do maintain Englishmen to the statutory and customary number as monks,[1] secular chaplains and servants in the said priory, and pay all tenths, fifteenths, and other subsidies in common with the clergy and commonalty of the realm, when and so often as they shall chance to be granted, in respect of their temporals and spirituals, and do bear and perform all burdens and works of charity imposed of old on the priory pursuant to its original foundation, any ordination to the contrary or the seisin of the priory in the hands of our grandfather or of the late king Richard on occasion of the war aforesaid or of ourselves, or any grants, or demises heretofore made by ourselves or by our grandfather or by the late King Richard to any persons notwithstanding. Willing and granting for ourselves and our heirs that the prior and his successors shall henceforth be quitted, exonerated, and for ever absolved from any yearly chief rent and payment to us or our heirs in respect of the priory on occasion of the said war, beyond the said apport, and we hereby do exonerate the prior and his sureties and others whosoever therefrom. Provided always that any arrears of the chief rent of the priory shall be accounted for and satisfied, as is just, as in our letters patent touching the same is fully contained. And we command you that you molest not nor grieve the prior in any thing contrary to the tenor of those presents.

[1] Apport (apportum) was the name for the tribute payable by alien priories to the parent monasteries.

The following Bull for discharging the church of St. James, Winchester, from cure of souls is entered here in a different hand :—

Bulla apostolica pro declaratione capellae sancti Jacobi prope Wyntoniam sine curâ.

Bonifacius episcopus, servus servorum Dei, ad perpetuam rei memoriam. Humilibus et honestis supplicum votis libenter annuimus, eaque favoribus prosequimur oportunis. Cum sicut exhibita nobis nuper pro parte dilecti filii Johannis Bochour rectoris parochialis ecclesiae sancti Jacobi prope Wyntoniam petitionis series continebat, quod predicta ecclesia in loco campestri situata existat et nec campanam libros aut vestimenta seu alia parrochialia insignia vel parrochianos habere dinoscatur aut visibiliter in futurum habere speretur, pro parte ipsius Johannis nobis fuit humiliter supplicatum ut curam animarum quæ eidem ecclesiae imminet extinguere eamque de cetero non parrochialem ecclesiam sed capellam sine curâ appellari, ac ipsum Johannem ad gerendum huiusmodi curam animarum minimè teneri debere auctoritate apostolicâ decernere et declarare de benignitate apostolicâ dignaremur : Nos igitur huiusmodi supplicationibus inclinati curam animarum quæ eidem ecclesiae imminet auctoritate apostolicâ ex certâ scientiâ tenore presentium extinguimus, et ecclesiam ipsam de cetero non parrochialem ecclesiam sed capellam sine curâ appellari, ac ipsum Johannem, seu quemcunque alium qui pro tempore huiusmodi capellam obtinebit, ad gerendum huiusmodi animarum curam minimè teneri debere, dictâ auctoritate decernimus et declaramus, constitutionibus apostolicis et aliis contrariis non obstantibus quibuscunque. Nulli ergo omnino homini liceat hanc paginam nostrae extinctionis, constitutionis et declarationis infringere vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis hoc attemptare presumpserit indignationem omnipotentis Dei et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum se noverit intercursurum. Dat. Romae apud sanctum Petrum xj Kal. Maii pontificatûs nostri anno decimo.[1]

[1] 21 April, 1399. Boniface IX was elected 2 Nov., 1389.

[In English.]

Boniface etc. Whereas it appears by the petition of our beloved son, John Bochour, rector of the parish church of St. James, near Winchester, that the said church is situate in the fields, and has no bell, nor books, nor vestments, and is without parishioners, and appears unlikely to have any in the future, and he has prayed us that it may no longer be a parish church but may be discharged from cure of souls, and that he may be relieved by our decree from such cure. Now we yielding to his supplication do by our apostolic authority discharge the church and declare it from henceforth to be a non-parochial church discharged from cure of souls, and that he and his successors in the church shall in future be relieved of such cure, any apostolic or other constitution to the contrary notwithstanding. Let no one dare to contravene these presents. And let him who does, know that he incurs the displeasure of the Almighty and of SS. Peter and Paul.—Rome, 21 April, 1399.

Si vero his temporibus impeditus fuerit, et necesse est, in sabbato ante dominicam Passionis quod dicitur Sitientes, et in sabbato quod est in vigiliâ Paschae, sacros potest ordines ministrare. Aliàs vero nunquam.—See Maskell's Monumenta Ritualia Ecclesiae Anglicanae, vol. III, p. 158, where the above passage is extracted from the rubric in the Sarum ordination office. [1] Title by patrimony was taken away by Canon 33 of 1603. Title by patrimony is frequently met with among the acts of ordination in our early episcopal records; and not only so, but title by a pension or allowance in money is frequently specified, and sometimes the title of a particular person (of known abilities and there named), without any such specification of an annual sum; and at such titles, after the estate, sum, or the like, is often added in the acts of ordination (especially when it was small), that the party therewith acknowledged himself content; which declaration so made and entered was understood to be a discharge of the bishop ordaining him from any obligation to provide for him.—Gibs., p. 140.
